Designed in Copenhagen — made ethically for all on Earth. At Organic Basics, we believe in comfort and sustainability for all. We make our basics to be both Earth- and people-friendly — carefully choosing materials and fabrics that care for our environment, only partnering with factories that consider their impact too, and designing all the basics for all bodies.

We love holding ourselves accountable – and part of that means asking ourselves whether or not it is even possible to be a sustainable brand. Producing things means contributing to a system that is already overflowing with newness. But finding certain things like underwear second hand might not be optimal — personal hygiene, size availability, and wear and tear can make it hard to find what you're looking for.

Because of this, we have chosen to produce the everyday basics that are difficult to find second hand and produce them as responsibly as possible. To make this possible, we use recycled, recyclable, plant-based, and organic materials, ethical means of production, and only collaborate with people, factories, and companies that are as passionate as we are about making good basics without harming the planet in the process.
